WHAT TO EXPECT?

The color of fiber reinforced concrete can vary slightly from piece to piece and can even appear to have a washed effect, adding to each product's unique charm. Also, due to the nature of this material, pinholes and small cracks may occur, and a patina is expected to develop over time. These characteristics are a testament to fiber reinforced concrete's beauty as it ages and are ultimately why we love including it in our repertoire of materials. To avoid undesired changes to the finish, it's best to protect this material from the elements. You can also refer to our care guide for further instructions.
