WHAT TO EXPECT?

Reconstituted stone is a composite material made from—but not limited to—crushed natural stone mixed with resin, cement, or polymer to create a durable material that's used for some of our most well-loved designs. Keep in mind that small chips, cracks, and changes in color are expected over time and inherent to the charm of this material. In fact, it's part of why we love designing with reconstituted stone; each piece evolves with us. To avoid undesired changes to the finish, it's best to protect this material from the elements. You can also refer to our care guide for further instructions.
